

Minnesota Reconciling Congregations invites you to:

Intersectional Justice: Why LGBTQIA+ and Racial Justice Can't be Siloed

with Rev. Dana Neuhauser

Our baptismal promises call us to resist evil, injustice, and oppression in whatever forms they present themselves. Queer & transphobia and racism are interrelated systems of oppression that require an equally interrelated resistance. This workshop will include a reminder of our baptismal promises, a brief overview of histories of harm, and some practical thoughts about advocacy and change moving forward.

This virtual learning experience will occur
Thursday, March 2 from 7-8:30. All justice seeking individuals are invited to attend.

Rev. Dana Neuhauser (she/her/hers) is an ordained deacon in the United Methodist Church. She likes to think of deacon as shorthand for justice-seeking, peace-making, disciple-equipping follower of Jesus. She has a heart for racial, LGBTQIA+, and environmental justice and seeks to invite and equip others to work for justice in the world as part of faithful living. She is the Minister of Public Witness for New City Church in Minneapolis.
